There will be many employee questions in the coming months that you will simply not be able to answer yet. Each inquiry, however, presents an opportunity to acknowledge what we do indeed know to be true about the merger and the integration planning process. While this may seem like a small thing, it enhances your ability to set a positive tone and deliver consistent messages to employees. The below list takes a look at how you can easily turn a simple “We don’t know yet” response into a chance to reiterate a key merger management message.

WHAT WE DO KNOW

The merger is expected to close in the second half of this year. We are in the process of securing regulatory and shareholder approvals to successfully complete the merger. We will begin operating as a combined company upon the close of merger.

WHAT WE DON’T YET KNOW

When will the merger close and when do we begin to operate as a combined company?

The focus of this integration is not headcount reduction. However, in order to successfully combine our two companies, it is inevitable that some people and positions will be affected. The Transition Committee and Integration Teams will work diligently to minimize the impact of the integration on employees.

Does the company’s commitment to maintain Nicor Gas’s headcount put more AGL Resources employees at risk of being impacted?

AGL Resources has committed to maintain the number of full-time equivalent employees currently serving Nicor Gas’ 2.2 million customers for three years following the close of the merger. This commitment ensures Nicor Gas will continue to have the personnel familiar with the company’s responsibilities for operating its distribution, transmission and storage systems, as well as its customer care operations. This commitment is not expected to directly negatively impact current AGL Resources employees.

What is the impact of integration plans being developed on specific teams or individual positions?

While it is still too early to understand the impact of establishing a new Distribution Operations headquarters in Illinois, the focus of this integration is not headcount reduction, and Transition Committee and Integration Teams will work diligently to minimize the impact of the integration on employees.

What is the impact of establishing a new Distribution Operations headquarters in Illinois on existing AGL Resources employees in other locations?

These are important concerns for employees and the Transition Committee and Integration Teams are committed to developing integration plans that are in the best interest of all employees. It is still too early in the process, however, to have answers to these questions. We commit to providing this information as soon as we are able.

Will employee benefits change, and if so, what changes are expected and when? Will severance packages be offered to affected employees? Will early retirement packages be offered?

The senior leadership teams of both companies are exceptionally strong, and they are making significant contributions to the integration planning process. The timing of the announcement of the new leadership team is yet to be determined.

When will the senior leadership team of the combined company be announced?
