Compugen and Novartis Pharma Extend License Agreement for Identification, Prioritization and Validation of New Drug Targets

Agreement includes collaboration for design of DNA probes and continued licensing of Compugen's LEADS platform

June 16, 2003

Tel Aviv, Israel - June 16, 2003 - Compugen Ltd. (Nasdaq: CGEN) today announced the extension of Novartis Pharma's license of Compugen's LEADS platform. In addition, Compugen will design a genome-wide collection of DNA probes for Novartis. The design of DNA probes is based on Compugen's expertise in transcriptome analysis, which takes into account important biological phenomena such as alternative splicing and naturally occurring antisense. Mor Amitai, Ph.D., President and Chief Executive Officer of Compugen Ltd., commented, "We are delighted that Novartis has elected to continue our very productive relationship for an additional year, thereby completing the maximum three-year term for the agreement. Our collaboration provides us the opportunity to continue to develop and improve our platforms and technologies for biological discovery, while working with - and learning from - one of the global leaders in developing novel approaches for drug discovery and development."

"We are very pleased with our successful collaboration with Compugen for the development of a high quality infrastructure for target identification and prioritization. Compugen's expertise, combined with the excellent working relationship developed between our two teams of scientists, enabled us to both meet all of the milestones, and ultimately helps feed our drug target pipeline," said Dalia Cohen, Ph.D., Head of Functional Genomics, Novartis Institute for Biomedical Research, Inc., in Cambridge, MA.
