RYANAIR ANNOUNCES NEW DAILY ROUTE FROM DUBLIN TO RIGA

Ryanair, Europe's No. 1 low fares airline today (Thursday, 3rd November 2005) announced a new route from Dublin to Riga (Latvia) that will operate daily from the 9th January 2006.

Announcing the news in Dublin today, Michael Cawley, Ryanair's Deputy CEO said:

"We are delighted to start our first route between Ireland and Eastern Europe with a daily flight to Riga commencing in January 2006. In the first year of operations, 80,000 passengers will enjoy our low fares between Dublin and the Latvian capital for a fraction of the high prices being charged by Aer Lingus and Air Baltic.

"Ryanair began operating flights to and from Riga at the end of 2004 and now offers daily routes from Riga to 6 European cities. Riga's 800 year history has made it a hugely popular destination for tourists around Europe and the leisure market from Ireland to Riga will be transformed because Ryanair's low fares will make it an affordable city break destination for the first time.

"The considerable Latvian population in Ireland will also benefit from our low fares allowing them to travel more often between the two countries courtesy of Europe's lowest fares and save a fortune in the process.

"This new route goes on sale today on www.ryanair.com with widely available fares from only EUR9.99* and we are advising passengers to book now as demand for fares this low to Riga will be very strong".

Route	Airline	Fare	Fare comparison
