Economic Environment

The global economy continued to show moderate recovery. However, growth in emerging economies is starting to slow due to the protracted European sovereign debt issue and delayed economic recovery in advanced economies. Against this backdrop, 2012 is expected to be a milestone year for politics, with elections and changes in the top leadership of major nations taking place and economic policy of each country drawing attention.

The United States economy continues to maintain moderate growth, although there are some concerns over downside risks such as lagging recovery of employment and the residential property market.

The pace of growth in emerging Asian economies is becoming moderate due to sluggish growth in domestic demand, in addition to the softness of the European and United States economies. Amid efforts by certain countries to support their economy through monetary easing, ability for Asia to serve as the engine for global economic growth has weakened, although the growth rate of Asian economies is relatively high compared with advanced economies.

Despite some concerns over the slow growth in overseas economies, the Japanese economy is showing a moderate recovery, with improvement in production activity and consumer spending. While the political situation remains unstable, there have been advancements such as proposed consumption tax hike becoming a real possibility, and the future growth strategy for Japan has become the focus of attention.

Overview of Business Performance (April 1, 2012 to June 30, 2012)

Total Revenues for the three-month period ended June 30, 2012 (hereinafter "the first consolidated period") increased 6% to ¥251,791 million compared to ¥238,126 million during the same period of the previous fiscal year. Compared to the same period of the previous fiscal year, interest on loans and investment securities increased due to large collections in the servicing business, life insurance premiums and related investment income increased due to an increase in number of policies in force, and other operating revenues increased mainly due to an increase in revenues from the real estate operating business.

Edgar Filing: ORIX CORP - Form 6-K

Total expenses increased 4% to ¥214,813 million compared to ¥206,284 million during the same period of the previous fiscal year. Both interest expense and provision for doubtful receivables and probable loan losses decreased compared to the same period of the previous fiscal year due to a decrease in the balance of liabilities and a decrease in the amount of non-performing loans, respectively. On the other hand, write-downs of securities increased mainly due to an increase in write-downs recorded for non-marketable securities compared to the same period of the previous year.

Equity in net income of affiliates increased compared to the same period of the previous fiscal year primarily due to an increase in profit from domestic equity-method affiliates. Gains (losses) on sales of subsidiaries and affiliates and liquidation losses, net increased compared to the same period of the previous fiscal year due to a revaluation gain resulting from consolidation of ORIX Credit Corporation as a subsidiary.

As a result of the foregoing, income before income taxes and discontinued operations for the first consolidated period increased 25% to ¥47,467 million compared to ¥37,921 million during the same period of the previous fiscal year, and net income attributable to ORIX Corporation increased 50% to ¥34,773 million compared to ¥23,237 million during the same period of the previous fiscal year.

The United States economy continues to maintain moderate growth, although there are some concerns over downside risks such as lagging recovery of employment and the residential property market. Meanwhile, the rate of growth in Asian economies is becoming more moderate due to sluggish growth in domestic demand, in addition to the softness of the European and United States economies. Even under such circumstances, stable profit has been maintained in this business segment.
