Entergy Arkansas Files Spin-off, Merger Request with State Regulators

Entergy Arkansas and ITC Holdings Corp. filed a joint application today with the Arkansas Public Service Commission to create an industry-leading electric transmission business serving Arkansas.

Under the proposal, ITC would serve wholesale customers including Entergy Arkansas and other entities using Entergy's transmission lines such as the Arkansas Electric Cooperative Corporation and the municipal electric authorities of the cities of Jonesboro, Conway, West Memphis and Osceola, as well as independent power producers. Meanwhile, Entergy's operating companies will continue to own and operate their respective distribution and generation businesses and will provide customer service, billing, outage reporting and restoration services to homes and businesses in the region.

This initiative lays the groundwork for the 21st century electric grid serving Arkansas and the region, Hugh McDonald, president and chief executive officer of Entergy Arkansas. It results in two companies that are stronger in many ways operationally, financially and strategically and that are best positioned to meet the growing demands placed on the electric industry.

The proposal represents a long-term, strategic view of the electricity business held by Entergy's leadership and board. It is also consistent with the Arkansas Public Service Commission's clearly stated desire for Entergy Arkansas to operate as independently as possible from the other Entergy operating companies. The proposed spin-off and merger completely separates transmission planning and operations to fully realize the commission's objective of operating independently regarding transmission.

As a system initiative, the spin-off and merger transaction must be reviewed and approved by all of Entergy's local and federal regulators, as well as ITC shareholders. To date, the transaction has been filed with the Louisiana Public Service Commission, the New Orleans City Council and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. Remaining filings will be completed this year in Mississippi, Missouri* and Texas. Assuming all regulatory approvals and other closing conditions are met, transaction would close in 2013.

The electricity industry including Entergy's operating companies faces growing challenges to keep pace with the capital investment requirements necessary to maintain and upgrade infrastructure, meet environmental regulations and serve an energy-intensive economy. In the industry as a whole, these investments are projected to total $1.5 trillion to $2.0 trillion between 2012 and 2030. As the nation's only independent, transmission-only utility, ITC can successfully finance significant transmission system improvements while delivering excellence and operational expertise to the region.

Employees can learn more about the transaction on the transmission merger intranet page.

* Approval also required in Missouri due to limited assets there.
