Subject: Merger and Integration Update

As we begin the New Year, we thought it would be helpful to give you an update on our plans to combine our companies. Following our announcement on December 11, 2017, Joe Dively, CEO, First Mid, and some members of the First Mid team, visited several First Bank locations to make introductions and share our enthusiasm about the merger. For those of you who were able to attend, we hope you learned some things about First Mid and also got some of your initial questions answered. We'd like to provide some additional details to convey next steps during this time of transition.

In January and February, you will start to see some interaction between team members of our banks, as we begin to understand roles and responsibilities, processes and systems of each department. As you can understand, this will take time and we appreciate your patience in reaching each individual person.

The timing of the transaction closing is largely driven by regulatory approvals; therefore, we will not know the exact date until we get closer to completion, but we anticipate it will be sometime in the second quarter. The merger of the banks and converting of accounts from First Bank to First Mid is scheduled through First Mid's core banking system provider (Fiserv). We presently expect the conversion to happen in August along with the name change to First Mid. As we get closer to these dates, a conversion team will be formed and a plan put in place to smoothly convert accounts and communicate changes to our customers. We expect to have First Bank employees join the conversion team sometime in March.

In the meantime, while we still operate as two banks, please continue doing what we do best, which is taking care of customers. We're excited about the opportunities that lie ahead and are eager to work together to join our companies into one.

If First Bank employees have questions, please continue to direct them to Matt Carr at mcarr@firstbanktrust.com. We may not have all the answers yet, but we'll share what we can until more decisions can be made and communicated.

Thank you.
