Nicholas-Applegate Convertible & Income Fund Performance & Statistics

February 28, 2007 (unaudited)

- Nicholas-Applegate Convertible & Income Fund had a net asset value (NAV) and market price return of 13.46% and 14.60%, respectively, for the fiscal year ended February 28, 2007. Careful security selection was a key driver of the Fund performance. In the convertible portion of the portfolio, top performers were companies in the consumer discretionary and cyclical categories. In the high-yield portion of the portfolio, performance was attributable to a broad range of sectors with a brisk pace of upgrades fueling relative returns over the reporting period.
- Corporate credit markets generally delivered solid returns for the one-year period ended February 28, 2007. The convertible market finished the period on a positive note, as the Merrill Lynch All-Convertible Corporate Index increased 11.01%. During the same period, this measure of the convertible market slightly lagged the S&P 500, which returned 11.97%. The Merrill Lynch Master II Index, a gauge for the high yield market, returned 3.65%.
- Among high yield bonds, solid market performance was a result of ongoing confidence in the core fundamentals across the issuers in the market. Balance sheets have been healthy. Refinancing over the past three years has generally created lower interest-expense obligations and extended maturities. The default rate remains low and is not expected to change in the near future.
- The new issues calendar for high yield bonds has been significant; in November 2006 the tally for new issues was not only a record $29 billion, but $10 billion ahead of the record set in 1998.
- In the high yield portion of the portfolio, we experienced a brisk pace of upgrades in the high yield portion of the portfolio with nine positive rating actions in the fourth quarter of 2006 alone.
- In the convertible market, advancing U.S. equity and debt markets contributed to positive returns. Equities rallied through the period on healthy economic activity, solid corporate profits and the Fed's decision to stop raising interest rates. All sectors posted positive returns in 2006 as companies continued to use strengthened balance sheets to improve shareholder value.
- Investors exhibited a preference for mid- and larger-capitalized convertibles, and convertible securities oriented to total return continued to outperform yield-oriented or busted convertibles.
- Despite a pickup in new issuance of convertible securities toward the end of the period, there was negative net new growth in the convertible market as solid equity market returns and low interest rates continue to drive calls, redemptions and tenders.
- We believe that convertibles remain a compelling investment. The economy is healthy, corporate balance sheets are solid, and defaults are low. The stock market reflects investor confidence in a positive economic outlook. We expect companies to use the high cash levels on their balance sheets and future free cash flow to boost shareholder value. Share buybacks, increased dividends and merger and acquisition activity are possible uses of excess cash issuers may deploy excess cash to fund share buybacks, an increase in dividends as well as merger and acquisition activity. Other catalysts for the equity markets could include such possible events as Fed rate cuts, a cooling of inflation, an expansion of market multiple expansion and healthy corporate profits.

(1) Past performance is no guarantee of future results. Total return is calculated by subtracting the value of an investment in the Fund at the beginning of each specified period from the value at the end of the period and dividing the remainder by the value of the investment at the beginning of the period and expressing the result as a percentage. The calculation assumes that all income dividends and capital gain distributions have been reinvested at prices obtained under the Fund's dividend reinvestment plan. Total return does not reflect broker commissions or sales charges. Total return for a period of less than one year is not annualized. Total return for a period of more than one year represents the average annual return.

An investment in the Fund involves risk, including the loss of principal. Total return, price, yield and net asset value will fluctuate with changes in market conditions. This data is provided for information only and is not intended for trading purposes. Closed-end funds, unlike open-end funds, are not continuously offered. There is a one-time public offering and once issued, shares of closed-end funds are sold in the open market through a stock exchange. Net asset value is equal to the total assets applicable to common shareholders less total liabilities divided by the number of common shares outstanding. Holdings are subject to change daily.

(2) Market Price Yield is determined by dividing the annualized current per share dividend to common shareholders by the market price per common share at February 28, 2007.
