April 2011 Order Comments:

Emerson order trends remained solid, driven by strength in global capital goods end markets. As expected, trailing three-month orders excluding currency have moderated to approximately 8 percent, dropping two points from last month as comparisons get tougher. Currency exchange rates positively impacted orders by 5 percentage points.

Process Management end markets remain strong. Project wins continued globally and MRO orders remained solid. Order growth is starting to moderate from very high levels and comparisons will be more difficult going forward. Currency exchange rates positively impacted Process orders by 11 percentage points.

Solid global capital spending trends continued to drive strong order growth in Industrial Automation, even with tough prior year comparisons. Growth remained very strong for the power generating alternator business.

Network Power orders continued to improve and increased 5 percent in the trailing three-month period. Modest order growth resumed in the Network Power business in Asia. The embedded computing and power businesses remained slightly negative against very tough prior year comparisons. Solid order rates continued for the uninterruptible power supply business.

Climate Technologies order growth remained positive against very difficult prior year comparisons. U.S. residential trailing three-month order growth remained positive, but moderated from the prior month as channel inventory replenishment ramped up in previous months. Global refrigeration remained solid with strength in transport and industrial refrigeration. Orders in Asia declined as expected compared with a very strong prior year period and fiscal tightening in China.

Tools and Storage orders reflected growth in the professional tools, commercial storage and disposer businesses which was partially offset by weakness in the residential storage and wet/dry vacuums businesses.
