The company's CEO today held a meeting with 650 employees in the Bilbao Euskalduna Centre

IGNACIO GALÁN: THE AMICABLE TRANSACTION BETWEEN IBERDROLA AND SCOTTISHPOWER WILL BE BENEFICIAL FOR THE WORKERS OF BOTH COMPANIES

During the meeting, held for the fifth year running, Galán highlighted the fact that the project represents a new milestone in the history of IBERDROLA and has been made possible thanks to the growth and value created by all of us over the last five years

The integration of ScottishPower in IBERDROLA will basically be beneficial for the workers of both companies, Ignacio Galán, CEO of the company, declared during today's meeting with 650 employees in the Bilbao Euskalduna Centre.

Along these lines, Galán pointed out that, the resulting group will offer us new opportunities and great possibilities for professional development on all the markets on which we are present, adding a new dimension and boost to training to ensure that the company's growth focuses on the growth of the individuals on which it is based.

During the meeting, which was held for the fifth year running and was followed live over the company's intranet by approximately 1200 employees, the CEO of IBERDROLA explained that, belonging to a business group of this size will provide us with a level of stability and occupational safety even higher than the one we have at present, ensuring the continuity of our growth project.

Ignacio Galán also made mention of the fact that the proposed transaction with ScottishPower represents a new milestone in the more than 100 years of IBERDROLA's history and has been made possible thanks to the growth and value created by all of us over the last five years.

Similarly, the CEO referred to the fact that IBERDROLA has more than fulfilled the objectives it set in its Strategic Plan 2002-2006, increasing the power installed and the production of electricity by 80%, the energy distributed by 40% and the supply quality in Spain by 30%.

Galán also declared that the integration of ScottishPower in IBERDROLA will enable, among other things, an increase in the company's size, generating more value for all its shareholders, turning us into a leading enterprise in the energy sector with a more balanced business portfolio at the fore of the wind energy sector on a world scale. It will also provide access to new opportunities for long-term growth.

New Strategic Plan 2007-2009

Ignacio Galán referred to the integration with ScottishPower as part of IBERDROLA's new strategic plan 2007-2009, which was presented on 4 October last and, besides continuing with the company's organic growth, also takes in inorganic growth.

Accordingly, the CEO explained, the transaction, which reinforces the company's commitment to its shareholders, customers, individuals and society in general, complies with all the strategic and financial criteria laid down by IBERDROLA: it is to be carried out in a country whose energy market is deregulated and with an enterprise that integrates generation, distribution and commercialisation activities and the results will have a positive effect on both profits and cash flow to maintain financial soundness.

During the meeting, Galán put forward the guidelines for the Strategic Plan 2007-2009, a plan by people for people, which continues along the lines of the successful strategy of five years ago. This new plan includes the start-up of a new investment cycle, which is to include the allocation of 9000 million (+20% in comparison with the previous three-year period) as a commitment to the basic energy business both in our country and abroad.

Of the total, 37% will be used for the renewable energy business, while the deregulated and regulated businesses in Spain and the Latin American business will represent approximately 20% each. International investments will be given increasing significance, rising from just over 25% during the 2001-2006 period to almost 40% over the next three years.
