Richmond Brothers, Inc. and Mark H. Ravich, together with the other participants named herein (collectively, “Richmond Brothers”), intend to make a preliminary filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission of a proxy statement and accompanying proxy card to be used to solicit votes for the election of Richmond Brothers’ slate of two highly-qualified director nominees to the Board of Directors of Rockwell Medical, Inc., a Michigan corporation (the “Company”), at the Company’s upcoming 2017 annual meeting of shareholders, or any other meeting of shareholders held in lieu thereof, and any adjournments, postponements, reschedulings or continuations thereof.

On March 2, 2017, Richmond Brothers issued the following press release:

Richmond Brothers and Mark Ravich Announce Nomination of Two Highly-Qualified Candidates for Board of Rockwell Medical, Inc.

Believe Continual Strategic and Execution Failures and Weak Corporate Governance Have Led to Years of Underperformance at Rockwell

Company Has Failed to Monetize Promising Drugs Triferic and Calcitriol

Current Board and Management Have Ignored the Best Interests of Shareholders and Repeatedly Rebuffed Attempts at Constructive Dialogue

Mark Ravich and David Richmond Would Be Strong Voices in Support of Improved Corporate Governance, Communication with Shareholders and Drive for Increased Shareholder Value

JACKSON, MI and ST. LOUIS PARK, MN (March 2, 2017) – Richmond Brothers, Inc., a Michigan-based SEC registered investment advisor and wealth management firm that is the largest beneficial owner of Rockwell Medical, Inc. (NASDAQ: RMTI) (“Rockwell” or the “Company”), and Mark H. Ravich, who together with their affiliates beneficially own over 6.1 million shares, or 11.9% of the Company’s outstanding common stock, today announced the nomination of David S. Richmond and Mark H. Ravich for election to the Company’s Board of Directors (the “Board”) at the upcoming 2017 Annual Meeting of Shareholders (the “Annual Meeting”).

David S. Richmond, Chairman of Richmond Brothers, Inc., and Mark H. Ravich issued the following statement:

“As long-term holders of Rockwell Medical stock, we have been disappointed time and time again by the current Board and management’s repeated strategic failures and the poor corporate governance that we believe have plagued the Company for years. We have made multiple attempts over several years to engage constructively with Rockwell to discuss improvements to the Company’s strategic approach, execution and corporate governance – but we have been repeatedly rebuffed. Management and the Board have proven themselves to be strongly averse to shareholder friendly actions, have failed dismally to communicate with shareholders in a transparent and constructive manner and have been unable to effectively execute on strategies that would drive shareholder value.

The fact that the Company’s compensation plan was voted down by shareholders at the 2016 Annual Meeting, coupled with the nearly 11 million votes withheld from the director then running for reelection, demonstrates, in our view, shareholders’ frustration. Unfortunately, management and the Board have failed to heed these signals of shareholder discontent and have persisted in running Rockwell as if it were a private company not accountable to the interests of public shareholders.

Furthermore, we believe that with the right strategy and proper execution, Rockwell has the potential to increase significantly in value, especially if its new FDA-approved iron maintenance drug Triferic becomes the standard of care iron maintenance therapy for hemodialysis patients. In our view, the market does not yet understand Triferic's opportunity worldwide for hemodialysis or the potential to develop Triferic as a platform drug for numerous other indications. Based on a model focused on just the dialysis market in the U.S. alone (i.e. not even the best case scenario), a recent analyst note from Craig-Hallum Capital Group suggests: 'On a longer term basis, if Triferic advances towards a full commercial launch, we believe that revenue can exceed $300 million given the expected ramp in Triferic and Calcitriol. Applying a 7x revenue multiple would produce a ~$42 stock price.'¹

The following represent some of the strategic missteps and corporate governance issues that have plagued Rockwell in recent years:

The Company has failed to monetize its promising drug candidates. It has now been over two years since the approval of Triferic and more than three years since the approval of Calcitriol, the Company's vitamin D drug, and Rockwell has failed to generate revenue from either. We believe this clearly calls into question management's strategy and competency to successfully build shareholder value.

In the most recent example of this, in February 2017 the Company announced that once again it had failed to get FDA approval to manufacture Calcitriol (a drug that has already been approved) and would have to start that process over, which will cause a delay of at least four to six months.

- o Furthermore, the Company has not aggressively developed opportunities for licensing Triferic throughout the world or been sufficiently proactive in developing Triferic for other indications.

Management has continually left investors in the dark. Rockwell's management has been running the Company in an opaque manner that makes it extremely difficult to recognize the Company's true potential. They have never publicly defined the size of the markets of other indications for which Triferic can be used. Additionally, they have failed to put forth a plan and timeline for achieving success in these markets.

Rockwell has repeatedly disappointed investors with its performance. Management has consistently disappointed its investor and analyst base through lack of performance, poor guidance and a lack of effective communications with its shareholders. A good example of this was the Q4 2015 earnings conference call during which the Company announced without any advance modification to its guidance that it effectively priced Triferic out of the market in order to seek higher reimbursement. Many analysts dropped their coverage of the Company at that time.

The Company has been characterized by dismal corporate governance. Leading proxy advisory firm ISS has assigned Rockwell a QualityScore of 10, the worst possible score on a scale of 1 to 10, indicating the highest governance risks. Some of the ways in which the incumbent directors have utilized the Company's corporate machinery to insulate themselves from stockholders include the classified structure of the Board, requiring action by written consent to be unanimous unless the proposed action is pre-approved by the Board and permitting shareholders to call special meetings only upon the request of a majority of the outstanding shares. The Board's apparent attempt to insulate itself appears to be working given that out of the Company's five directors, three have been on the Board for 17 years and a fourth has been a member for more than 11 years. Meanwhile, ISS takes the position that tenure of more than nine years is considered to potentially compromise a director's independence. These, and other governance shortcomings at Rockwell, have caused ISS to recommend a WITHHOLD vote with respect to Rockwell's directors standing for reelection at its past two annual meetings.

The Company suffers from poor compensation practices. Chairman and CEO Robert Chioini's compensation is significantly above industry standards and he has been granted excessive short-dated stock options – taking advantage of the low stock price we believe he helped create – despite his poor performance. While public shareholders were significantly diluted by the Company's botched financing in 2013, Mr. Chioini has managed to more than make up for this dilution via his excessive option grants. Shareholders rightfully defeated the Company's compensation plan at the 2016 Annual Meeting – given that it lacked any merit-based structure and essentially rewarded management simply for occupying their positions – and the Company has operated without a compensation plan since May 2016.

Given this litany of issues, we believe that Rockwell is in desperate need of Board members who have the best interests of ALL of the Company's shareholders at heart and who will be responsible stewards of shareholder value. We believe fresh, independent voices at the Board level would disrupt the culture of entrenchment and inaction that has characterized the Company's governance to date and would have the potential to lead to further Board refreshment in the future. As large, long-term holders of Rockwell stock, we believe that we are very well-qualified to bring a truly shareholder-friendly perspective to the Company's Board and push for the real change that is needed at the Company.

We would also note that because the Company did not disclose which class recently-appointed director Robin L. Smith belongs to, it is unclear at this time whether one or two Board seats are up for election at the upcoming Annual Meeting. This ambiguity is yet another example of Rockwell's failure to communicate transparently with shareholders.
