Portfolio Review

Market overview and portfolio performance

The Taiwan Stock Exchange Index (the TAIEX) rebounded sharply in August, gaining 6.2% month-over-month in U.S. dollar terms and reversing in part the 8.2% decline in July. The rally in August was across broad sectors, led by foreign fund inflows and an increase in retail investor interest based on: 1) undemanding valuations, 2) the increase in domestic consumption demand following the recent typhoon (i.e., building material and steel) 3) the ease of corporate earnings downgrade worries and 4) the upcoming seasonal pick-up of technology products (i.e., back-to-school and Christmas). In terms of sector performance, cement, textile, automobile and paper were the leaders in August. Technology shares also regained strength driven largely by Integrated Circuit (IC), Communication, Printed Circuit Board (PCB), Foundry and Packaging gains. During the month of August, the Fund was in-line with the performance of the TAIEX.

Market Outlook

In the near term, we anticipate an up to 8% to 10% increase in the TAIEX. We expect the TAIEX to continue a consolidation trading range between 5,400 to 6,400 by the end of 2004, with catalysts driven by seasonal pick up within the technology sectors, healthy domestic demand and stronger-than-anticipated demand in the industrial cyclical sectors (i.e., steel, petrochemical and shipping). For the industrial cyclical sectors, we expect companies to post better-than-anticipated earnings for 2004. In turn, this should provide a potential share driving force to the TAIEX. We anticipate that Morgan Stanley Capital International s (MSCI) re-weighting adjustment to the Taiwan market will act as a positive catalyst drawing favorable foreign fund inflows to the TAIEX. However, we are cautious about the potential risks, including: 1) global economic slowdown caused by high oil prices, 2) inventory build up on technology products, 3) somewhat cautious guidance given by technology companies, 4) the low visibility of technology companies order book and 5) increasing supply in the semiconductor sector.

Portfolio Strategy

For the coming months, our investment strategy is to continue to increase partial weighting in those companies with steady earnings within domestic consumption and industrial cyclical sectors. Meanwhile, we will continue to hold our downstream technology blue-chip stocks with sustainable earnings, and search for quality and growth-driven small-cap shares. In the mid-term, we intend to reduce our weighting in upstream technology shares, and a move to more defensive stocks, when opportunities present themselves.
